1. INTRODUCTION

1.1 PROJECT OVERVIEW

Nowadays, fashion applications and e-commerce are growing more and more, and it also has some problems when finding the customer's wanted product in the web applications. Having a chatbot that understands the algorithm of a specific application can be of great aid. We are implementing such a chat bot in a web application, which is fed with the knowledge of the application's algorithm and helps the user completely from finding their needs to processing the payment and initiating delivery. It works as an advanced filter search that can bring the user what they want with the help of pictorial and named representation by getting simple user information and activities. The application also has two main UI interactions: one is the user panel and the other one is the admin panel. Users can interact with the chat bot to search for products, order them from the manufacturer or distributor through chatbot AI, and it can also make payment transactions, track the delivery, and so on. The admin interface enables the user to upload products' details, user details, orders and find how many products have been bought; supervise the stock availability; and interact with the buyer regarding the product reviews.

We have come up with a new innovative solution through which you can directly do your online shopping based on your choice without any search. It can be done by using the chat bot.

In this project you will be working on two modules:
1. Admin and
2. User

Admin:

The role of the admin is to check out the database about the stock and have a track of all the things that the users are purchasing.

User:

The user will login into the website and go through the products available on the website. Instead of navigating to several screens for booking products online, the user can directly talk to Chat bot regarding the products. Get the recommendations based on information provided by the user.

1.2 PURPOSE

a) Using chatbot we can manage user's choices and orders.

b) The chatbot can give recommendations to the users based on their interests.

c) It can promote the best deals and offers on that day.

d) It will store the customer's details and orders in the database.

e) The chatbot will send a notification to customers if the order is confirmed.

f) Chatbots can also help in collecting customer feedback.

2. LITERATURE SURVEY

2.1 EXISTING PROBLEM

1. Fashion item representation

   Traditional recommender systems such as Collaborative Filtering or Content-Based Filtering have difficulties in the fashion domain due to the sparsity of purchase data, or the insufficient detail about the visual appearance of the product in category names. Instead, more recent literature has leveraged models that capture a rich representation of fashion items through product images, text descriptions or customer reviews, or videos which are often learned through surrogate tasks like classification or product retrieval. However, learning product representations from such input data requires large datasets to generalize well across different image (or text) styles, attribute variations, etc. Furthermore, constructing a representation that learns which product features customers take most into account when evaluating fashion products is still an open research problem.

2. Fashion item compatibility

   Training a model that is able to predict if two fashion items 'go together,' or directly combine several products into an outfit, is a challenging task. Different item compatibility signals studied in recent literature include co-purchase data, outfits composed by professional fashion designers, or combinations found by analyzing what people wear in social media pictures.

3. Personalization and fit

   The best fashion product to recommend depends on factors such as the location where the outfit will be used, the season or occasion, or the cultural and social background of the customer. A challenging task in fashion recommendation systems is how to discover and integrate these disparate factors. Current research often tackles these tasks by utilizing large-scale social media data.

4. Interpretability and explanation

   Most of the existing fashion recommender systems in the literature focus on improving predictive performance, treating the model as a black box. However, deploying accountable and interpretable systems able to explain their recommendations can foster user loyalty in the long term and improve the shopping experience

5. Discovering trends

   Being able to forecast consumer preferences is valuable for fashion designers and retailers in order to optimize product-to-market fit, logistics and advertising.

"A Systematic Study on the Recommender Systems in the E-Commerce"

Electronic commerce or e-commerce includes the service and good exchange through electronic support like the Internet. It plays a crucial role in today's business and users' experience. Also, e-commerce platforms produce a vast amount of information. So, Recommender Systems (RSs) are a solution to overcome the information overload problem. They provide personalized recommendations to improve user satisfaction. The present article illustrates a comprehensive and Systematic Literature Review (SLR) regarding the papers published in the field of e-commerce recommender systems. We reviewed the selected papers to identify the gaps and significant issues of the RSs' traditional methods, which guide the researchers to do future work. So, we provided the traditional techniques, challenges, and open issues concerning traditional methods of the field of review based on the selected papers. This review includes five categories of the RSs' algorithms, including Content-Based Filtering (CBF), Collaborative Filtering (CF), Demographic-Based Filtering (DBF), hybrid filtering, and Knowledge-Based Filtering (KBF).

3.3 PROPOSED SOLUTION

S.No.	Parameters	Description
1.	Problem Statement (Problem to be solved)	Recommendation systems have the potential to explore new opportunities for retailers by enabling them to provide customized recommendations to consumers based on information retrieved from the internet by developing a cloud-based application.
2.	Idea / Solution description	• The goal of a recommender system is to provide personalized suggestions to users, based on large volumes of historical feedback, by uncovering hidden dimensions that describe the preferences of users and the properties of the items they consume. • Traditionally, this means training predictive algorithms that can identify (or rank) items that are likely to be clicked On, purchased (or co-purchased), or given a high rating. • In domains like fashion, this can be particularly challenging for a number of reasons: the vocabulary of the items are long tailed and new items are continually being introduced (cold-start); users' preferences and product styles change over time; and more critically, the semantics that determine what is 'fashionable' are incredibly complex.
3.	Novelty / Uniqueness	• Fashion recommendation systems and methods to personalize clothing are also included in this subcategory, in fact, these systems are meant to develop collaborative filtering to predict user preferences online, when data from purchase history are lacking, as well as content-based filtering, to support consumers' decision-making process, improve the customer experience and increase sales. • Thus, in this project, we proposed a personalized Fashion Recommender system that generates recommendations for the user based on an input given. • Unlike the conventional systems that rely on the user's previous purchases and history, this project aims at using an image of a product given as input by the user to generate recommendations.

S.No.	Parameters	Description
4.	Social Impact / Customer Satisfaction	• The chatbot can give recommendations to the users based on their interests. • It can promote the best deals and offers on that day. • It will store the customer's details and orders in the database. • The chatbot will send a notification to customers if the order is confirmed.
5.	Business Model (Revenue Model)	• This application is accessible to everyone. It is free. Nowadays the need for online shopping increases. Anyone with basic knowledge can access this application. • This can be used anywhere anytime. The user's information is encrypted. • We maintain this app by automation for saving admin and user time. • We have a FAQ section where the users can clarify their doubts and also a review section and ratings where they can share about the product's quality they bought, which helps the one who are going to buy this.
6.	Scalability of the Solution	• Even though there are many positive reviews about a product, few negative reviews will mislead or make the user to think about of buying that product somewhere. • Additional charges like delivery process or packing fee, which increases the final purchase price, makes the user look for better options.

11. CONCLUSION

Recommendation systems have the potential to explore new opportunities for retailers by enabling them to provide customized recommendations to consumers based on information retrieved from the Internet. They help consumers to instantly find the products and services that closely match with their choices. Moreover, different stat-of-the-art algorithms have been developed to recommend products based on users' interactions with their social groups. Therefore, research on embedding social media images within fashion recommendation systems has gained huge popularity in recent times. This paper presented a review of the fashion recommendation systems, algorithmic models and filtering techniques based on the academic articles related to this topic. The technical aspects, strengths and weaknesses of the filtering techniques have been discussed elaborately, which will help future researchers gain an in-depth understanding of fashion recommender systems. However, the proposed prototypes should be tested in commercial applications to understand their feasibility and accuracy in the retail market, because inaccurate recommendations can produce a negative impact on a customer. Moreover, future research should concentrate on including time series analysis and accurate categorization of product images based on the variation in color, trend and clothing style in order to develop an effective recommendation system. The proposed model will follow brand specific personalization campaigns and hence it will ensure highly curated and tailored offerings for users. Hence, this research will be highly beneficial for researchers interested in using augmented and virtual reality features to develop recommendation systems.

12. FUTURE SCOPE

There has been significant progress recently in fashion recommendation system research, which will benefit both consumers and retailers soon. The use of product and user images, textual content, demographic history, and cultural information is crucial in developing recommendation frameworks. Product attributes and clothing style matching are common features of collaborative and content-based filtering techniques. Researchers can develop more sophisticated hyper personalized filtering techniques considering the correlation between consumers' clothing styles and personalities. The methods based on employing a scoring system for quantifying each product attribute will be helpful in increasing the precision of the model. The use of virtual sales advisers in an online shopping portal would provide consumers with a real time offline shopping experience. Retailers can collect the data on users' purchase history and product reviews from the recommendation system and subsequently use them in style prediction for the upcoming seasons. The integration of different domain information strengthens the deep learning paradigm by enabling the detection of design component variation, which improves the performance of the recommendation system in the long run. Deep learning approaches should be more frequently used to quickly explore fashion items from different online databases to provide prompt recommendations to users or consumers.
